Reel: India’s vote on Cuba: what UPSC will ask

YouTube Short · about 1:30 · English + తెలుగు · connected story · no short forms

How to record

- Camera at 1080p, one take, send the original file.
- Sound intrigued: start with a “strange but true” tone, then explain calmly.
- The bold questions are the bridges: ask, pause half a second, then answer.
- Telugu lines (🗣️): slower and warmer.
- At the end, stay still and smile for 2 seconds.

Script

How it flows: the strange idea → the vote → how India voted and why → why it matters to us → trap → Mains debate.

📷 FULL FACE: intriguing, “strange but true”.

What if a law passed in Washington could punish a company in Hyderabad?

🗣️ వినడానికి వింతగా ఉంది కదా?

Last week at the United Nations,

🗣️ ఇదే పెద్ద debate.

Let’s decode.

🎙️ clear, news voice.

Last week, the United Nations General Assembly voted, for the 34th time, to end the American embargo on Cuba, in place since 1962. It passed with 130 votes, far fewer than last year’s 165.

🎙️ curious, then explaining.

And how did India vote? In favour, again. Because India rejects laws with extraterritorial effects, where one country’s law reaches into other countries. Under America’s Helms-Burton Act of 1996, even foreign companies dealing in Cuba can be sued.

🗣️ అంటే, వేరే దేశం చట్టం మన companies మీద కూడా పడొచ్చు.

🎙️ connecting to us, serious.

So why does this matter to us? Because such pressure touches India too: American sanctions on Iran have threatened India’s Chabahar port project.

🗣️ అందుకే India strategic autonomy ని కాపాడుకుంటుంది.

🎙️ slower, “write this down”.

Prelims trap: a General Assembly resolution is not binding; only Security Council decisions bind, under Article 25 of the United Nations Charter. So the embargo stays, but the message is loud.

📷 FULL FACE: thoughtful, inviting.

Mains debate: can India stay friends with America and still vote against its embargo?

🗣️ మీ అభిప్రాయం comments లో రాయండి, and follow for one exam trap every day!

(Stay still and smile for 2 seconds.)

Pronunciation: extraterritorial [EX-tra-te-ri-TOR-ee-al] · Helms-Burton [HELMZ BUR-ton] · Chabahar [CHAA-ba-haar]

Description: > The United Nations General Assembly voted for the 34th time (28–29 October 2026) to end the American embargo on Cuba (in place since 1962): 130 for, 17 against, 25 abstentions, down from 165 in 2025. India voted in favour, rejecting laws with “extraterritorial effects”, such as America’s Helms-Burton Act (1996). Why it matters to India (Chabahar port and sanctions on Iran; strategic autonomy) and the Prelims trap: Assembly resolutions are recommendations; Security Council decisions bind (Article 25, United Nations Charter).
